BUCK & WRIGHT

The propriety of opening each year with a concert of prayer on the part of all christians throughout the world for the blessings of grace to be bestowed upon all flesh, originated with a small band of devoted Missionwies, laboring among the metaphysical but superstitions Hindoos, not long after the dreadful Sepoy rebellion had made some of their co-laborers martyrs to the cause of Jesus. Here, as often before, the blood of martyrs was the sead of the church. Those gore-stained sands of Cawnpore have attered a voice to the ear of the christian world, calling it to its knees at the commencement of Fall and Winter stock of staeach year. This voice has been heded by many, ever since it was uttered, and annually the sound of prayer has gone up from the warm hearts of Christ's true follow ers, like the sweet odors of the morning and the evening sacrifice. There is indeed something thrilling in the truth that at the same hour millions of carnest lovers of God, scattered all over the earth, amongst almost every kindred and tribe of the people, are uniting their hearts and voices in imploring the mercy of our offended

Father upon his apostate children. There are several important and most precious truths, of which this annual observance is the standing confession of the church.

1. The power of prayer. Christ said, "Ask and ye shall receive." "Whatsoever ye skall ask in my name I will do." The church has heard these words of the Master, and has believed them. Therefore, in opposition to the fatalist, on the one hand, and the infidel, on the other, God's people have ever believed that prayer was a direct and an essential agency in the securing of the divine blessing. True christians have always prayed, and true christians have always received answers to their prayers.

2. The divinity of salvation. If man is to save himself, or to save hifellow man, then there would be no propriety in asking God to do it. God never does for man what man ean do for himself. The christian world, therefore, in recognition of the great fact of man's weakness and helplessness in the matter of his sal Having purchased our goods vation, join together in prayer to from first hands, in Eastern Him, who alone can save, that He Cities, we are enabled to offer would grant repentance unto I-rael, unusual inducements to the and salvation to the Gentiles.

3. The essential unity of the church. of Dress Goods is large, va-This does not consist in mere out ried, attractive and cheap, conward combination. This often ex- sisting of iete, where true spiritual unity is French and German Plaid Poplins, wanting. It is "the unity of the Plain, Plaid, Figured and Moire antispirit, in the bonds of peace." That | que harmony which the Holy Spirit produces in faith, and hope, and love. Unity in conversion, in holiness, in eternal life. Oneness in essential belief, oneness in labor, oneness in common sympathies, and promises, and hopes. Oneness in our grief, in our joys : oneness in our discouragements, oneness in our vic-

This glorious unity is symbolised in our week of prayer. While in our ordinary labors, we work in sep arate sections, and thus, by God's hlessing, perhaps accomplish the greatest good, yet once in every twelve months, at the beginning of every year, we forget entirely the things wherein was 4.6.

"One family we dwell in Him,
One courch above, beneath."

4. The cause of missions is the cause of Christ. As we have already Prints, Bleached and Brown stated, the setting apart of this season originated in the mission field. Its primary object was and is to ask God's special favor upon the efforts made to convert the world. God has made to convert the world. God has ors, and very cheap. omised that the nations shall acknowledge Him and rejoice in His Ladies', Misses' and Children's eburch to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Upon these two facts, Jehovah's promises, on the one hand, and the commands of Jesus, on the other, the holy work of missions is based. God has greatly blessed them already. We believe that He will continue to bless them, and that in fulfilment of and in fact everything that is needed TURNING. This is the faith of the Lord's people as expressed in their united week of prayer.

The Master's blessing has always attended the observance of this season. May it not fail us this year. But here, in our own midst where we need it so greatly, may it richly descend, and up all the nations may it pour until "Earth shall keep jubilee a thousand years." Ardinger's Column
